The Art and Science of Storytelling

Over the last decade business storytelling has emerged as a powerful communication skill and leadership competency. In this high impact keynote, Gabrielle will provide compelling reasons and insights for why leaders need to embrace storytelling to connect, engage and inspire.

The audience will experience first hand the power of sharing personal stories to communicate business messages. In addition they will gain valuable insights on what makes a story a story and how to avoid the most common mistakes when sharing stories in business.

Authentic Communication

In an ongoing age of information overload and technical disruption, communicating in a way that is more effective and engaging is need more than ever before.

In this entertaining and educational keynote, Gabrielle will show leaders how they can ensure their messages are not only understood but remembered. Pointing out the hidden consequences and often hilarious absurdity of using corporate jargon and business speak, Gabrielle will motivate the audience to speak in a way that is more real.

Great audience connection

I could not recommend Gabrielle more highly: this is a tough subject topic - senior leaders can be very suspicious of the benefit of storytelling - but Gabrielle drives home the message elegantly. She has a great connection with the audience whether they be CEO's of businesses or front line team leaders - she passes on years of learning into a very easy to understand chapters. She is very 'low maintenance', needs little or no introduction; the event organisers all commented that it was a pleasure to work with her. Gabrielle is highly entertaining - but her message hits the target and resonates. Not surprisingly she received the highest rating from all 700 delegates - the star of the event.

Hilarious & Insightful

If you've worked in organisations where the leadership didn't "get it," and where their corporate jargon filled the workplace like a dull grey fog, then you'll find Gabrielle's messages about authentic business storytelling to be as refreshing as a cool sea breeze! She shares her own hilarious and insightful experiences in helping senior leaders become authentic storytellers and connect with employees on a personal, meaningful level. Through her own stories, she teaches how we can use the power of storytelling to drive better business results.
